

Industry-Specific Resources

Almost every industry has its own grants, associations, and support programs. Below is how to find the ones for your field. Tick the box once you've checked each one.

⚠ BEFORE YOU START

Your industry likely has a trade association and targeted funding most people never find. The tools below help you uncover them — all free to search.

1 Find Industry Grants

Search by your specific field for targeted funding.

☐ Grants.gov — Search by Category

Filter federal grants by industry and category.

→ www.grants.gov/search-grants

☐ SBA — Industry-Specific Guidance

SBA help tailored to fields like manufacturing, agriculture, and tech.

→ www.sba.gov/business-guide/grow-your-business

2 Join Your Trade Association

Industry groups offer grants, training, discounts, and connections.

☐ Find Your Trade Association

Nearly every industry has a national association with member resources and sometimes grants. Search your industry + "association."

→ Search your industry + 'national association'

3 Sector-Specific Federal Programs

Different agencies fund different industries.

☐ USDA — Food, Farm & Rural

Funding for agriculture, food, and rural businesses.

→ www.rd.usda.gov/programs-services/all-programs

☐ DOE & EPA — Energy/Green

Grants for energy, clean tech, and environmental businesses.

→ www.energy.gov/eere/funding/funding-opportunities

☐ NEA — Arts & Creative

Funding for arts and creative enterprises.

→ www.arts.gov/grants

4 Get Tailored Help

Advisors who know your specific industry.

☐ SCORE / SBDC Industry Mentors

Free mentors, often with experience in your exact field.

→ www.score.org

⚠ WATCH OUT FOR

Watch for “industry grant” lists that charge a subscription — Grants.gov and trade associations give you the real information free. Verify any program on its official site.

★ A TIP THAT HELPS

Joining your industry’s trade association is often worth it — members get early word on grants, plus discounts and training that quickly pay back the dues.
